That trend maps directly into hospitality, where brands increasingly compete on atmosphere, story, and memory.

Dear Mr. Miller,

some weeks ago, I stayed at the Pannonia Grand in Budapest.

Not only did I have an amazing time but it also inspired me to draft a video game themed and situated at your house. Please have a look for yourself

This experience can be customized even further to match your event schedule of 2026. Imagine sending out the game as a present to your guests around Christmas season and reminding them about last available spots throughout skiing season. Or, dedicating a Santa's adventure at your venue to your guests' children. Possibilities are almost endless thanks to the power of AI.

Extend hospitality into the digital world and let's exchange on your favorite scenario soon!

I am looking forward to hearing from you and would be happy about a suggestion for a brief call or of course at your amazing venue.

Best regards,

GRAND PANNONIA

And now, it is your turn to check-in to the Grand Pannonia hotel

Try this:

- Turn on audio, music and voices are designed to match the mood board
- Casually ask the receptionist for his hobbies – he should mention teddies
- Ask him for Andrea Richter's room number – he should refuse
- Give him the teddy as a present and ask for the room number again – he should give you the room number now

Or try crazy things like throwing all your money from the suitcase into the hallway – thanks to AI there are no limits to immersion[1]
